Long, long ago, in the land (1) that we now call New Zealand, a *Maori woman named Rona lived with her husband in a small village beside a river. Rona loved her husband very much, but she was a person who was often angry.

One night, Rona's husband was *thirsty and he asked her to get him a drink of water. Of course, the husband could easily get up to get himself some water. But in those days (2) it was the *custom for a good wife to *serve her husband. Rona was warm and *comfortable in her bed. She didn't want to get up. But she was a good wife and when he asked her again, she got up. There was no more water in the house, so (3) she would have to walk to the river to get some more. Rona didn't want to go, but her husband said he was very thirsty and so she went. But (A)

Rona walked to the river. The moon was full and she could see very well. She *filled a *bucket with some water from the river and started to go back to her home. Just then the moon went behind a cloud and it became very dark. Rona couldn't see anymore. Her foot hit a stone and she fell down. Of course, (B) Rona looked up at the moon. She was very angry.

"*Foolish moon!" she called. "Why did you go away? I couldn't see without you and I fell down and dropped my husband's water!"

Rona's voice was loud and very angry. The moon didn't like the way Rona shouted at him and he really didn't like being called '(C)'. He came down *angrily from the sky and started to carry Rona away. She tried to hold onto a tree, but the moon was much stronger than she was. He *pulled Rona up into the sky with him.

At the same time that the moon was pulling Rona up into the sky, her husband fell back to sleep. The next morning, after he woke up and found that she was gone, he and the other *villagers looked everywhere for her. They couldn't even find the bucket. So everyone believed that Rona fell into the river and *drowned. But that night, Rona's husband found her. When he looked up at the moon, he found she was sitting there, still holding the water bucket.

That's (D), just as Japanese people see a *rabbit in the moon and
